Conversions to organic farming are growing rapidly in wine growing without the knowledge and tools to support this break are operational. Many studies focus on the determinants of this process, but few of them analyze it in economic terms. This paper proposes a method to analyze the conversion trajectories dynamically in wine growing, thanks to economic and financial indicators. These indicators are then tested on ten farms and the qualitative results are presented.